

I spent a few days in Slovenia and I really liked it. I was surprised because most of people were glad all the time. They were also very kind and nice to me. I didn't have any problems with communicating with them.

I got on well with my host family and we're going to stay in touch. We spent a few evenings talking about everything and laughing. I learnt a lot of new words in Slovene. I also had an opportunity to meet my host friend's grandparents and they seemed to be great but unfortunately they didn't speak English. I liked every dinner I ate there.

Sentjur, the town of our school, was small but also very lovely. One fact made me completely astonished – students wore slippers at school. Students were full of energy every day.

The capital city of Slovenia was wonderful. It wasn't huge but breathtaking. We were able to visit the most important places during few hours. Ljubljana was a calm and quite quiet city.

In my opinion Slovenia is a small but very peaceful country and it's worth seeing. The experience I got there while Erasmus+ is unforgettable. It raised my awareness about importance of soil and also I know now what to do to protect it. I also made new friends and I hope I'll meet them in the future.
